Perfect Aesthetics

Contemporary orthodontics requires precision orthodontic products to transfer exactly the right amount of force to move the teeth to the desired position. Generally orthodontics is divided in to removable and fixed orthodontics.

Invisible forces

As implied by the name, fixed orthodontics require something to transfer forces on to the teeth in order to move them. These components are called brackets and are stuck to the teeth with a special type of glue which can be easily removed after completion of your orthodontic treatment. Today these brackets can be made from high tech plastic materials which make them almost invisible without compromising on clinical needs and efficiency.
